OFFICE: No. 15 Quincy Street. MONDAY, MARCH 25, 1872.

THE Connecticut canvass, which has been dull up to this time, will be lively the coming week. The Republicans and Democrats have engaged many of their leading politicians to canvass the State Mr. JAMES R. DOOLITTLE and Judge CARPENTER of South Carolina, ore already at work for the Democrats. General HAWLEY, Senator FERRY, General HAR-RIMAN of New Hampshire, Major Had-GERTY of New York, and Congressman WILLIAMS of Indiana, are "booked" by the Republicans for speeches nearly every day until the close of the canvass. The Republicans seem with reason to be confi-

PRESIDENT GRANT has made a good Minister to Peru. "His devotion to the principles of human liberty," says the LIAM T. HAMILTON on the issues therein set forth. Of course he was heaten, but the fact that there was a man in Mary land who dared to raise the anti-slavery banner in those days should not be foring out of the war he lived in retirement, almost in seclusion. The firing on Sumter waked up his slumbering energies and rekindled the patriotic fervor of his soul. The appeals which he made to the people Union will be remembered long after the Union will be remembered long share the been destroyed; the bianger manufacture of gray haired orator has been laid to his kency has been destroyed; the cambet trad Bandon, which produced £100,000 a year, rest. He was elected to Congress for three successive terms, and notwithstanding the fact that he represented a district in which many of the old anti-slavery prejudices still lingered, he was always and dreads no bankrunter found voting for what were then called cave I wish to refer to some local matters which I have taken pains to instruct mysolf on: First, I will refer to your building societies, the best temperance law in God's world, and one which requires no act from Legislature or Congress. Let a man once invest; 100, or even less, in a 10t and forthwith both himself and family put forth, all their efforts to pay off its indebtedness. He has a fixed object before him; a home to live in; he owns no landlord; that is his, and those loved owns no landlord; that is his, and those loved not not not considered the continuous properties of the matter, which good wages, he also becomes a citizen, and to a good fortune is a hopeless prospect for him at home.

a man once invest $100, or even less, in a lot and forthwith both himself and family put forth all their efforts to pay off its indebtedness. He has a fixed object before him; a home to live in; he owns no landlord; that is his, and those loved ones he will some day leave behind him. No longer is the proverbial Irishman found in Wheeling, with a whisky bottle in his pocket. No; he now carries his title deeds, and further, his tablet in which is set down what price his riend and neighbor paid for this and that lot, and its present market value. This he compares with his own. Visit the news depots, the eigar stores, postoffice, and even go into the saloons, listen to the conversation going on, and you will find it so lo longer of the faction lights or the triumph all about Tim Connell's corner lot, Hugh's new purchase on the Island, and so on. Yes, to your great credit, workingmen of Wheeling, you possess six building societies, owning over two millions of solid property. To one of these societies I wish particularly to allude, for it is compossess six bullding societies, owning over two millions of solid property. To one of these societies I wish particularly to allude, for it is composed mostly of Irishmen. The Workingmen's Building Association, about two years in existence, have to-day $25,000 in hand, ioaned in cash $$6,000, with property worth nearly one million of collars. You, workingmen of Wheeling, can boast of three large rolling mills owned and worked by yourselves. You have a co-operative carriage works, that one near the post-office, which is strictly co-operative. I might go along and tell more that I know about your progress and industry, for it has been my pleasure to have, on two occasions, written of these facts, in the publication with which I am cultorially connected, and in its columns, for some two years, I spoke rather sharply of your apathy in not looking more to your rallored interests. To might I congratulate you that you have woke up to it at last, and that the good work is rapidly proceeding. As a grand railroad center wheeling is bound to progress and become a full aliser to Pittsburgh. I return you my thanks for having borne with me so long. I will conclude by raying, if you value all the blessings of happy homes, and all paid for; if you value celucation for your children; if you wind not debate by an estrangement of yours from all these; if you wond not cheate by an estrangement of yours from all these; if you wond not cheate by an estrangement of yours from all these; if you wond not cheate by an estrangement of yours from all these; if you wond to the beasings of happy dones, and is a strictling fact in connection with the subject of wages demands admission here. One startling fact in connection with the subject of wages demands admission here. American produces and produces and produces and who, through their emissaries, under the spurious pleas of revenue reform, would maintain the present tariff on teas, coffees and other necessaries which we do not produce, and der the spurious ples of revenue reform, would maintain the present tariff on tess, coffees and other necessaries which we do not produce, and which, by being removed, would give them to us so much cheaper; and either bringing in duty free, or at a very low duty, foreign manufactured goods made by the fil-paid and half-starved victims of their oppression, to compete with you in your own market, thus necessitating a reduction of wages or the closing up of our mills, foundries, machine shops and various industries, as depletion of gold in the public treasury, and inflated currency and a universal financial clisis; and impeding our onward and rapid march as the youngest but foremost battle of the world.
